Our Vision For A Sustainable
Future

Our Mission

Achieving Net

Zero

By 2050

Creating a better future for us. And generations to come.

Edwardian Hotels London is deeply committed to the global task of creating a better future for us and generations to come.

In 2021, all member countries at COP26 in Glasgow pledged to reach net zero by 2050. The importance of this collective goal inspired Edwardian Hotels London to align with this commitment and make it our mission to secure net zero by mid-century. We continuously review and evolve our practices, partnerships and supply chain to ensure we operate as sustainably as possible, making small everyday changes as well as larger long-term investments to be a step closer to achieving our ambitions.

Operations

Energy & Carbon

Edwardian is committed to reduce its carbon footprint and impact on the energy grid through constant investment and development of operational aspects, such as guest towel reuse initiatives, installing energy-efficient LED lighting, and investing in combined heat and power units to improve fuel efficiency and reduce emissions.

Travel Plans

We encourage our guests and staff to use the excellent public transport links available on our doorstep, for travelling into and across London and Manchester.

Carbon Neutral Meetings

We work with First Climate at some of our properties to offset the carbon footprint of every meeting and event we hold, through projects that help reduce emissions and have a positive social impact.

Plastics & Recycling

The group is working towards having only reusable or recyclable items in bedrooms, meeting rooms, event spaces and public areas, and where plastics still remain, these are made using recycled material.

Amenities

We were one of the first hotel groups to move away from single-use amenities and introduce refillable receptacles in bedrooms, public areas and staff changing rooms across all properties.

QR Codes

We are reducing single-use menus by introducing QR codes in bedrooms and across public spaces. Anything that is printed is done so on FSC certified paper, which has been harvested in a responsible manner.

Waste Management

Edwardian Hotels London works with innovative suppliers and procurement to reduce on-site wastage. The group's aim is to transform how waste is handled with an emphasis on working towards a circular economy and looking to achieve zero waste management.

Adande Refrigeration System

The kitchens are equipped with Adande Refrigeration systems, which uses an insulated drawer system that allows for the best performance of refrigeration and reduces food waste.

Waste Management System

Everything is recycled with full segregation of general waste, glass, cardboard, food wastage and oil with our nominated suppliers, with carefully planned collections to reduce transport emissions.

Technology

Investment in digital tools and technology has always been a priority for the group. We are continuously exploring new solutions to make our operations both smoother and more sustainable.

Digital Keys

Edwardian Hotels London have introduced digital room keys to some properties and are looking at implementing this technology across the portfolio.

Supply Chain

Food & Beverage

The produce in all our restaurants is sourced from local suppliers whenever possible. We work closely with Aldens family butcher in Oxfordshire, Watts Farms in Kent and Essex for all our fruit and vegetables, and James Knight of Mayfair for fish and seafood.

Aldens: 225 Years of Quality

Aldens is a Red Tractor licenced family-owned business which has supplied Edwardian Hotels London for over a decade. They source beef and lamb that are grazed in the UK and are part of a regenerative farming system, meaning the livestock from this production system is carbon neutral. Aldens transport all their produce in zero emission refrigerated electric vehicles.
